Slaughter Working with Catherine Lennon and Mortgage Lender Fannie Mae to Resolve Tragic Situation

WASHINGTON – Congresswoman Louise Slaughter (NY-28) today announced that with her office's assistance a Rochester woman and her family of 11 will now have the ability to return to their home following an eviction by mortgage lender Fannie Mae.

Catherine Lennon of Rochester called Slaughter's office in March asking for the Congresswoman's help so she could stay in her home with her family. It was Slaughter who first alerted Fannie Mae to Lennon's situation. On March 28, Lennon was evicted from her Ravenwood Ave. home.

Fannie Mae is in the process of presenting a make whole offering that would allow Ms. Lennon to repurchase her home so her family could return there.

"It is my pleasure to help Ms. Lennon and her family so that her grandchildren may return to school and their lives can return to some level of normalcy," said Slaughter. "She and her family remind us that the foreclosure crisis is nowhere near over. Our economy is still recovering and I will continue to work diligently in Washington to correct the policies that lead to this crisis. I continue to wish Ms. Lennon and her family the very best."
